The 100 Black Men of America, Inc. recommend yearly rectal exams (DREs) and blood tests (PSAs) for men at the highest risk beginning at age 35. This group includes men of African descent and men with family history (father or brother). Men of average risk are encouraged by some health care professionals to be tested and examined starting at age 40. Dr. Anthony Sibley, MD and Nathaniel Hill, PA-C will provide educational talks during this clinic. In addition, blood pressure, cholesterol, and diabetes testing will be performed.
